David Berman is joined by actress Jennifer Garner and his son, Leo, at the second annual Jessica M. Berman Wonder Woman Walk for Breast Cancer.

The second annual Jessica M. Berman Wonder Woman Walk for Breast Cancer was a family affair that raised funds to fight breast cancer and child neurological disorders.

The Sept. 18 event at Palisades Park raised more than $600,000 to support cancer research and other patient support services and honored the late Jessica Berman, a Pacific Palisades resident who died of breast cancer at the age of 38 in 2014.

Her survivors include her husband, David, 51, and their two children, Abby, 7, and Leo, 5. All three — plus David's 90-year-old mother, Sue Berman — took part in the 5K that began and finished at the scenic park and cut through nearby residential neighborhoods that had been closed off for the event.

Overall, about 1,250 attendees turned out for the interfaith fundraiser. Some walked with their dogs, many were dressed as superheroes, and others turned out with their respective faith communities, including actress Jennifer Garner.

"I'm just here to walk with my church, to support women, support Jessica's family and be part of the community," Garner told the Journal at the conclusion of the walk, a partnership between the Jessica Berman Foundation and Tower Cancer Research Foundation (TCRF).

Many members of Wilshire Boulevard Temple took part in the walk, including a team called "Wilshire Warriors," consisting of mothers of students at Brawerman Elementary School of Wilshire Boulevard Temple. They raised nearly $20,000 for the cause.

Additional attendees included Russell Kern, chairman of the Jewish addiction treatment center Beit T'Shuvah, and Nancy Mishkin, a board member of TCRF and chairperson emerita of Beit T'Shuvah.

David Berman expressed gratitude for the turnout and display of caring at the event: "To see our kids dressed up — 7-year-old Abby, as Wonder Woman, and 5-year-old Leo, as Superman — and the outpouring of love and support, (Jessica) would be misty-eyed and humbled and gracious about it."
